Monmouthshire Educational Psychology Service One Page Profile

What people like and admire about us...

People tell us that we are approachable, and that our involvement with children and young people is useful.

We are friendly and professional and listen well to everyone's view.

What is important to us...

- Working in a collaborative and preventative way, keeping psychology at the core, and being flexible and adaptable
- Advocating for the vulnerable
- Having informed consent to work with children and young people
- Understanding what matters to children, young people, schools and families
- That people who request our involvement fully engage with us
- Keeping up to date with research about children and young people's needs
- Having good communication with those we work alongside
- Positive and constructive feedback.

What we might do to try to help...

- Observe children in the education setting.
- Hold consultation meetings with staff to make plans to help children and young people.
- Hold joint school/family consultations to make plans.
- Involve children and young people in the process.
- Work directly with children and young people.
- Contribute to reviews.
- Train staff to develop their knowledge and skills
- Provide supervision to staff in schools (Emotional Literacy Support Assistants)
